THE NEW WAY TO SPELL ECONOMY—
C-H-A-L-M-E-R-S

A cheap piece of machinery, like the boy with a little knowledge, is sometimes a dangerous thing.

Men are buying better and better lawn mowers, and reapers, and printing presses, and gasoline engines and pumps.

Why? Because they find it pays.

Probably there's no better example of this in the case of automobiles than Chalmers cars.

Figures show that over 75% of men who have bought Chalmers cars this year previously owned a $500, $600 or $800 car.

And the great big increase in Chalmers sales (792% in six months) has come from towns just like this.

In the old days Chalmers cars were sold for the most part in towns like New York and Chicago.

You can find Chalmers cars most any time of the day in most any block in such towns even now.

But in the smaller communities Chalmers cars are most numerous today. Because the people in towns like this were quickest to see the value, note the endurance, and observe the wonderful performance.

Particularly of this 3400 r. p. m. Chalmers, which is, in our opinion, the most able car that ever came to this town.

Price $1090 Detroit, a car well worth $1400.

WASHINGTON COUNTY FARM BUREAU ASSOCIATION.

Report for week ending July 22:
Farmers visited 18
Letters written 24
Persons calling 10
Telephone calls 13
Meetings 4
Attendance 127
Miles traveled 173

The past week has proved a very busy one for the farmers, as all are rushing in their hay. Usually we are getting the hay into the barn the best way we can and as quickly as we can. This is the proper way to do. However, there are several points to be considered and it usually happens that we will be able, if we use good judgment, to work in some of the better methods of hay curing and get thereby a more valuable crop. The aroma of hay has a real value in feeding. It increases palatability. Unless cut in the afternoon hay should not be left scattered on the field overnight, as the dew will carry away a lot of the aroma. When the hay bleaches, that is, loses too much of its green color, we may know that harmful chemical changes are taking place. By curing in the cock we retain the color and aroma.

Salt and lime scattered over hay when put in the mow tend to prevent fermentation and check the growth of molds and mildews. These are not necessary but are helpful, as they tend to keep the hay that is put in the mow in a damp condition. The salt also makes the hay more palatable.

A very interesting field meeting was held by the Waterbury Farmers' club at the farm of Mr. LeBaron on Tuesday, July 18. Mr. LeBaron has a small acreage of alfalfa which is doing well. He has a small plot of the Cossack variety set aside for the purpose of sowing the seed so that he will be able to sow next year the same variety. He hopes that by maturing the seed in this climate he will get a more resistant strain of alfalfa, one that will stand our climate better. His main field of alfalfa is one of the common, northern grown varieties. This variety has a tap root, while the root system of the Cossack alfalfa is of the shallow type and better adapted to our severe winters. Mr. Corryell gave a talk about alfalfa in Vermont. Among other interesting facts he noted that in the past 10 years the acres of alfalfa in Vermont have increased from less than 25 to 2,500. We can grow alfalfa if we treat it right.

H. L. Bailey, working under State Commissioner of Agriculture Brigham, spent a half day with the county agent this week inspecting potato fields. There is quite a call for reliable seed in this and other states, particularly of the Irish Cobbler and Green Mountain varieties. Owners of fields of these varieties, by application to Mr. Brigham, can have free state inspection of the crop, the benefit to be derived being that he can sell his potatoes as certified seed. This protects the purchaser and he can afford to pay a higher price for certified seed because he will know it is true to name and has no adulteration. The fields are inspected at blossoming time and the potatoes are inspected at digging time. The amount and kind of disease is noted as well as other details, so when a man buys certified seed he will know what he is getting. Don V. Camp and A. T. Smith & Son are the only farmers in Washington county to take advantage of the inspection so far. It is hoped that others will be able to see the advantage to be derived and will correspond with the county agent about it.

Plans for the joint picnic are maturing rapidly. We are assured of the presence of Mr. Collingwood, editor of the Rural New Yorker, J. P. Taylor of Burlington and E. S. Brigham of St. Albans as speakers and it is probable that one or two others will be added to the list. The date will be determined upon this week.

F. H. Abbott, County Agent.

WATERBURY

The Community Chautauqua is looming larger every day. The committee in charge of the advertising and the sale of tickets has begun its work. The event will begin Aug. 17 and close five days later. Two programs will be given each day. There will be a great abundance of music and noted speakers. A large waterproof tent will be pitched and all sessions will be held in this. A new feature this year will be the junior Chautauqua for the boys and girls, under the direction of an expert play director. Among the many people of note will be Fredrick Ward, who comes in this Shakespearean tercentenary year, as an impersonator of Shakespearean characters. He was for a long time a member of Edwin Booth's company and left the stage to devote himself to the platform. His subject will be "Shakespeare and His Plays." Among the musical numbers will be the American quartet and the same day Clayton Conrad will appear as cartoonist. Geoffrey O'Hara, who is a song writer and Irish tenor. The Dunbar southern singers will appear in songs of the southland, with Charles Frink, banjoist. The fourth day will be band day and will have Victor's Florentine band and Neapolitan troubadours. The wizard Norwegian violinist, Ole Theobaldi, and two assisting artists, Mme. Florence Alice Stitzel, operatic soprano, and Mlle. Helen Kelera, will give a concert of great worth. The violin upon which Ole Theobaldi plays is 300 years old and valued at $25,000.

CONCERNING THE MOUNTAIN RULE

The "Mistakes of Moses" were made into a classic but the mistakes of Senator Page's ill-advised friends will make a whole library before the campaign is over.

At a meeting of the greater Vermont association in Montpelier, held July 12th, 1916, former Governor Edward Curtis Smith of St. Albans was a guest of honor and one of the principal speakers.

After attacking the legislatures responsible for increasing railway taxes, and for other constructive legislation, Gov. Smith made a direct attack on Allen M. Fletcher. He also made some drastic remarks regarding the mountain rule. Ex-Governor Smith said:

"This proposition, native sons for Vermont offices, involves another. We are told that the mountain rule in our state politics is obsolete and out of date, and that it should be abolished. I am wondering whether this suggestion is prompted by a knowledge of the true situation in Vermont, and based upon a sincere and honest desire to benefit its best interests, or whether it is prompted by the exigencies of individual interests? Whatever the motive it is high time the people of this state should stick their heels in the soil of our green hills and call a halt on the question, until it can be decided by ourselves and for ourselves and after mature consideration."

Ex-Governor Smith is also proprietor of the St. Albans Messenger. In an editorial under date of Nov. 21, 1908, when he had no candidate for any state office, Gov. Smith's newspaper had the following under the head of "State and Politics."

The Barton Monitor remarks:

"After all Vermont is no better off because of its overwhelming Republican vote!"

"Certainly not. The state would be far better off in every respect were the two great parties more evenly balanced here."

"Incidentally, such a condition would do away with the 'mountain rule' which stands high in the list of such things that belittle and cheapen our politics."—Burlington News.

"Glory be! Let the good work go on. Spread the gospel of a common sense view of practical politics that means a practical business-like government and the realization of the 'New Vermont.'"

The 'mountain rule' was not made in the interest of the people but in the interest of the politicians. It is merely the device by which the politicians divide the spoils. 'You run on your side of the state this year and I will let you alone. Next time, I run and you keep hands off. Scratch my back and I will scratch yours.'

What's the result? Each succeeding two years the people of Vermont have to elect a governor, not from the whole state, but from a small section of it, no matter whether the man they want or the man they ought to have is in there or not. Perhaps a man literally ripe for the place is just across the line and his opportunity to serve the people and the state never would be more propitious. But the 'mountain rule' has established a dead line for more than one good man's ambition, and the opportunity passes for him perhaps never to come again. Then the state lost a good governor and took a man whose turn it was."

In an extract from an editorial in the St. Albans Messenger of July 16, 1908, which referred primarily to the promotion of the lieutenant governor to be governor and entitled, "The Non-promotion Bugaboo," the following appears:

".....The Messenger believes that a good man and an available and deserving man should be taken up as a candidate at an expedient time wherever he may be, so far as geographical situation in the state is concerned, or whatever state office he may have held or be holding, so far as the non-promotion idea is concerned....."

Was Governor Smith sincere in 1908, when he advocated the smashing of the mountain rule or in 1916, when he wants it perpetuated?

And isn't it now time to smash the mountain rule?
